

Campbell Mausoleum

This is a sumptuous mausoleum designed in the Byzantine style. It is built of alternate courses of red brick and white Portland stone and the dome is pierced by thermal windows. The door is of bronze and used to have glass panels. There is stained glass in the windows and the inner surface of the dome inside is clad with mosaic.

St Mary's RC Cemetery
Kensal Green
Harrow Road
Kensal Green
NW10 5NU

Scan for Google Maps Link

Architects

C H B Quennell

Year Built

1904

Style

--

Listing

Grade II (England and Wales)

Condition

2002: Exterior, fairly good (some stonework is missing from the rear edge of roof) but the interior has been vandalised (2002).

2023: Remains in good condition but little maintenance has been carried out recently (July 2023).

History

This is the family grave of J D Campbell (dates unknown) who, according to the inscription, was 'late of Peru'. He is not buried in the mausoleum. The first interment is that of Charles Edward Campbell (1871-1906) probably J D Campbell's son. The mausoleum also contains the body of Delmira Vargas de Campbell (1836-1906) presumed to be J D Campbell's widow.

Sources

NPC 1906

Photos

Location

SatNav Co-ordinates: 51.530238121, -0.2260364622